SCIENTISTS CONFIRM

WELCOME

This page is to explain what you will find inside this free supplement for Starship Scavengers.

These are the front pages of an in-universe data sheet (newspaper) that goes out across the sector.

Written in a slightly trashy journalistic style whether you can believe all you read it up to you.

You will also find that the important news often gets regulated to the margins to make way for the more crowd-pleasing articles - like sporting events or music concerts. (Just like in real life.)

The idea is to amuse you and give you some extra content for your scavenger games.

The advert at the bottom of each page should have enough game rule information in it that you can buy and use the equipment in-game for your character.

SINGLE PAGE

This is important!

Each release of the Frontier Times is only the front page of the in-universe paper.

That means that each page you see in this collected edition is the front page of a different edition of the data sheet.

Sorry, but when it says 'see more on pg 43' there is no page 43. I know, mean of us, but we don't have the time to write the whole fake newspaper!

The pages are numbered but not dated so read in number order and you will see news stories start, rise and ebb away.

Issues are listed most recent first.

LOST KALAR OCEANSHIP FOUND!

WRAITHS ONBOARD!

Passengers on several inner world luxury liners travelling between Doliea and Empress have reported seeing wraithlike figures on their ships.

These figures have been appearing in or near the engine rooms and then moving through the ship; some reports say randomly, others suggest they may be looking for something.

At first, it was thought these were wraith stalkers but we consulted with the R'ck R'ck (explorer and ex-officer in the legendary 38th Combined Armies Squadron) and he assured us that if those had been real wraith stalkers, everyone on board those vessels would have been killed.

Bear in mind R'ck R'ck is a mantid, so that is as close as our translation protocols can translate his words, but we think he was trying to be reassuring.

We understand that the captain of the luxury liner The Mary Sue triggered an engine radiation spike in a successful attempt to disperse these figures from her vessel.

The captain was praised for her quick thinking by authorities but is now being sued by several of the passengers for radiation sickness after they refused to take the radiation pills from the ship's stores as they 'tasted vile'.

(Ed. That's rich people for you, I guess.)

On other vessels, some crew and passengers have fired on these figures but to little or no effect.

More coverage of this on page 21.

Meanwhile, in an even more terrifying item, our entertainment reporter Bitzy Bling can reveal that the latest T. Tay.T album has TOTALLY bombed on release!! She is said to be horrified. We cover this inside on pages 2-20.

ZUZA ESTABLISH OFFICIAL COLONY ON OCIA

MADIS GINK DIES!

The reclusive billionaire, who's been avoiding our highly paid journalists for years, has finally died.

The official death declaration has been released, and it seems that his eccentric nature has lived on after his death.

Not only is the death declaration back-dated six months, but the will has been put into public domain for all to read – and the most incredible thing – you dear reader, could benefit from it!

At least maybe. More on that in a moment.

Madis left each of his fifteen children with a trust fund worth over one hundred million credits; however, we understand that for the last six months, a total of thirty-six different lawsuits have been raised by lawyers representing the children.

Those lawsuits are aimed at each other, AND the estate of their late father.

Yes truly. After being left a king's ransom in credits, these individuals want more.

Personally, this reporter would be on a beach on Trelqu!

As for the public share of the will, several facilities have benefited handsomely from the will, but perhaps the most exciting portion is a public treasure hunt for fifteen individual 'Madis Artefacts'.

Their exact nature or value is not stated in the will, but given the numbers on everything else in the will, it can only be expected that these are highly valuable.

Anyone can claim them, although over half the lawsuits from the children relate to these items and are challenging the giveaway.

Our overpaid lawyers (the editor said to call you that) say the will is legally sound and finders keepers. Needless to say, the scavengers in the system have gone wild, although the clues are obscure and some are time-locked. More inside, pages 12-24.

HUMAN RESEARCH VESSEL
HEART OF IRON MISSING!

LANDING DAY SPECIAL!

Two centuries after the scout ship Don't Know Where We Are Going but We Will Find Out Soon gracefully touched down* on the planet designated Heinlein 04, system-wide celebrations are being held.

*Rumours that it crash-landed are nothing but anti-military propaganda (we have been reliably informed by our contacts in the military.)

Admittedly, the celebrations are mandatory on Saurian planets as part of the system peace treaty but we are sure they are entering into them in the true spirit of the holiday.

Whether it is a colony ship touching down carrying millions of cryo-frozen eggs, or a past-it's-best scout ship hard-landing on a new planet humans always mark the calendar.

Obviously, that works out better when no one else owns the planet but given the long peace the Heinlein system has enjoyed the crew of the Don't Know Where did us all a fine job two hundred years ago today even if it was a shock to them at the time!

MUSIC FESTIVAL IS LIVE

As part of the Landing Day celebrations, the infamous New System Blues Music Festival went live this morning.

This year's line-up promises to showcase everything from what can be best described as traditional Earth wailing to music made from banging rocks together.

And we aren't joking about that last comment – the award-winning mantid band Rock-Dirt-Rock are opening the evening show and were seen in rehearsals practising with the traditional bong rocks which give mantic music its traditional – and divisive – sound.

NEW SHIP GRAVEYARD
FOUND? MORE DETAILS SOON!

ANNUAL RELIEF RUN

Classic ship enthusiasts have been waiting for this for ages, the annual charity relief run has happened and as is tradition it has been led by a cotton-tail ship.

For those of you who skipped their starship drive history class in school, so-called cotton-tail ships are an unofficial class of ships that use an ancient inner-system space drive that dates back to the Wars of Unreason.

Pseudo-jump capable, these drives, when they burn hard enough, can initiate a small inner-system jump, or hop, as it is usually called.

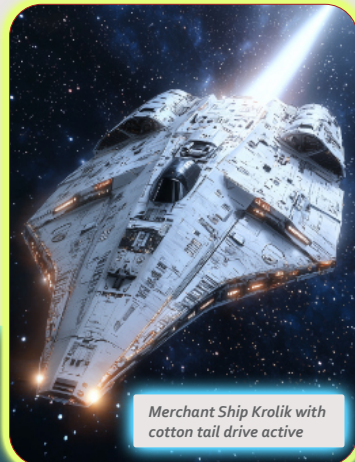

As everyone knows, regular jump engines cannot operate within a star system due to the gravitational forces from planetoids but the cotton-drive uses the gravitational waves and does some clever science stuff that makes the ship vanish, then reappear in a new location within the same system.

They get their name from a distinctive energy plume that is vented as the drive builds to the jump threshold.

The use of these drives is heavily controlled and so the relief run, which sees a small armada of ships taking supplies from the capital planets to their neighbours is one of the few times that enthusiasts can gather to legally witness one of these ships in action.

Our science reporter Trixxie McBeal has talked with GA scientists and aside from interesting gossip about the local science director (see pictures page 3) she can confirm that the stories about the drives causing space-time anomalies or attracting wraith stalkers have no basis in science.

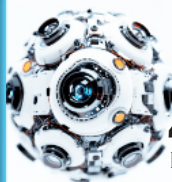

Of course, should something suitably horrible happen we will be the first to bring you the news!

POLITICAL MELTDOWN

On the mantid homeworld of Tyx Prime, hive prime elections ended in turmoil in several districts when winning candidates were jumped upon by their rivals and eaten alive.

Perhaps most surprising of all is that after a re-ballot was called, the killers, despite being in custody, were each voted in for the position of Hive Prime in their respective districts.

A spokesman for one of the winning candidates pointed out that eating a rival within a day of their winning electoral office was allowed under mantid tradition. They also added several comments about human politics which are too rude for the front page (see inside editorial pg 42).

The spokesperson then ended with 'Sneckwits in glass pods shouldn't throw grixx'.

We don't know what a grixx is but that also sounds pretty rude to us.

We hear the galactic alliance are speaking with the Tyx Prime world government to check the elections were by the book.

RACE DISASTER AVERTED!

The solar yacht race nearly ended earlier today in disaster when the passenger liner Solar Queen lost power and drifted into the race lanes.

The salurian pilot G'Rak performed a last minute brake and burn manoeuvre to dodge the drifting vessel whilst the zuza pilot Mora who was in second place, abandoned her race to stay with the stricken liner, broadcasting a collision warning.

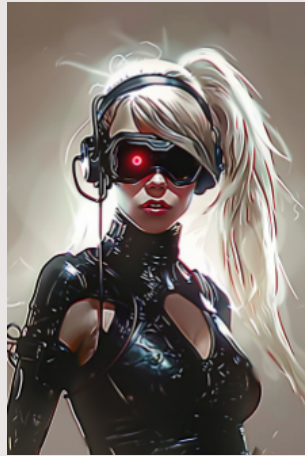

We understand that race officials are debating how to put her back into the race, potentially at the next transit point.

Questions are being asked why G'Rak's didn't stop and his team are yet to issue a statement.

For our analysis, see page 47.

PIRATE SIGHTINGS ON THE RISE - SECTOR WIDE WARNING IN PLACE

LAUNCHED!

After an unprecedented delay due to fears of pirate activity along the course and the mysterious assassination attempt on Star Marshal Johnny 'Comet' McQueen the 398th yacht race is finally underway!

Initial timing cams confirm that the ex-saurian-fighter-pilot-ace G'Rak is in the lead with the Zuza pilot Mora in surprise second place.

Fans will remember that Mora only just qualified with the lowest recorded trial time. We can only assume she's spent the last six cycles doing some serious training or engine tweaking for her to hold such a position.

All could change though as the race enters the Van Broom belt for the second leg.

And remember race fans, don't copy those sweet racing moves when flying over populated planets or you might get shot down by the orbital defence systems. Don't say we didn't warn you.

RACE FEVER!

Race fever is running high across the sector as the contestant list has finally been released for the 398th yacht race. With only two solar weeks to go before the start we have a full breakdown inside but the top news is that Star Marshal Johnny 'Comet' McQueen will be the official adjudicator this year.

Star Marshal McQueen is a local legend having been instrumental in brokering the peace deal with the Salurian Clans who held a historical claim on the sector before the human empire moved in. We hope to bring you an exclusive interview with him just as soon as his people returns any of our many messages.
